SCAC welcomed newly elected councillors from across the state during the Association’s virtual Orientation for Newly-Elected Council Members, held on January 5 & 7 at the SCAC Office in Columbia.

Offered every other year following the General Election, the program prepares newly elected county council members for their new duties and responsibilities.

Among the topics discussed were: roles and responsibilities of county council; forms and powers of county government; rules of procedure; county risk management; the Freedom of Information Act; budget basics and funding sources; and the State Ethics, Government Accountability and Campaign Reform Act.

The recorded webinars are available on SCAC’s learning portal for any newly elected council members for their new duties and responsibilities.

For more information or assistance, contact SCAC staff at (803) 252-7255.
Attendees were also given excellent insight on conducting court proceedings during a pandemic by the Honorable Perry H. Gravely, from the 13th Judicial Circuit, and the Honorable Walton J. McLeod, IV, from the 11th Judicial Circuit. Judge Gravely and Judge McLeod discussed their own personal experiences regarding the unique challenges and technological achievements that the legal community has faced over the past year while conducting virtual hearings.

Perhaps the liveliest presentation of the day was the “FOIA and Virtual Meetings – Is It Live or Is It Memorex,” delivered by Alexander “Sandy” Cruickshanks IV and Virginia “Ginny” Dupont. With more than 30 years of combined experience serving as county attorneys for Laurens and Spartanburg counties respectively, Cruickshanks and Dupont certainly provided a lot of valuable insight regarding the FOIA process in today’s “virtual world.”

The final presenter for this year’s event was Sheila Willis, an attorney with Fisher & Phillips, LLP, in Columbia. Willis, who presented an engaging and thought-provoking presentation regarding diversity in the workplace, also provided insight from her years of experience in practicing employment law.

The success for this year’s virtual program was evident by the outstanding turnout and the numerous comments that were submitted by the event’s attendees to SCAC staff. Keep an eye out in the coming weeks for an announcement regarding next year’s S.C. Local Government Attorneys’ Institute. Hope to see you there!
SC RIA Finances Infrastructure Investments to Address Infrastructure Challenges

By Liz Rosinski
Senior Program Manager, Marketing & Outreach
SC Rural Infrastructure Authority

From pipes to pump stations and tanks to treatment plants, South Carolina has an extensive network of water and sewer infrastructure across all 46 counties. This critical infrastructure is operated by public and private entities, serving more than five million people in the residential and business communities.

Millions of dollars are needed each year to keep this intricate and vast infrastructure strong, even as communities are currently focused on protecting public health and preparing for economic opportunities.

The need for ongoing rehabilitation and replacement comes at a time when many communities face increased expenses and decreased revenues as they respond to today’s challenges. And accessing local, state and federal dollars is crucial for a utility to maintain public health and environmental standards as well as provide the foundation for strong local economies.

There are a number of types of utility systems that serve South Carolina communities. In some areas, the need for water and/or sewer was addressed by the formation of special purpose districts (SPDs), which were created by the General Assembly. SPDs provide a governmental power or function, such as sewerage treatment or water distribution, that is separate from the functions of county government.

In many other cases, cities and towns expand their water or sewer customer base to include surrounding areas beyond their incorporated city or town limits. Governmental systems, such as SPDs and municipalities, are eligible to apply to the S.C. Rural Infrastructure Authority’s (RIA) grant program to fill funding gaps when addressing critical infrastructure needs.

For some parts of the state, not-for-profit private water and/or sewer companies were created to serve areas lacking in adequate infrastructure. While these types of systems don’t often have direct access to state and federal funds, counties may apply to the RIA grant program on behalf of the not-for-profit utility to assist with project implementation. For example, since 2013 Cherokee County has received $881,500 in grants to assist three different not-for-profit utilities with water system improvements within its county border.

Berkeley County, on the other hand, directly provides water, sewer and storm water services to its residential and business customers. In recent years, the county has qualified for $36 million in infrastructure funding primarily through the State Revolving Fund Program (SRF), a dual agency loan program between RIA and the S.C. Department of Health and Environmental Control (DHEC). Berkeley County’s funded projects addressed a range of water and sewer needs in an effort to upgrade aging lines, renovate pump stations and increase sewer capacity for a key industrial park.

There have been some national estimates that indicate at least $833 million will be needed for South Carolina drinking water improvements over the next 20 years, and sanitary sewer needs are projected to be even greater. Various federal and state programs provide assistance annually for several local capital improvement projects.

RIA makes available more than $100 million in grant and loan financing each year for critical water, sewer and storm drainage improvements. The agency works in partnership with communities to address today’s infrastructure challenges and prepare for tomorrow’s opportunities.

Dorchester County Veterans Affairs Director Named S.C. Veterans Affairs Officer of the Year

The S.C. Association of County Veterans Affairs Officers (SCACVAO) on November 5 honored Dorchester County Director of Veterans Affairs Cindy Busby as S.C. Veterans Affairs Officer of the Year for 2020.

Each year, the SCACVAO honors the county veterans affairs officer who makes a lasting impact and goes above and beyond for veterans and their families in their home county and across the state. As Veterans Affairs Officer of the Year, Busby joins a prestigious group of public servants who exemplify professionalism, and superior performance and care while serving our nation’s veterans.

“Cindy has shown dedication to this association for many years,” said Todd Humphries, SCACVAO President and Director of Veterans Affairs for Cherokee County. “Her professionalism is something everyone can only hope to obtain.”

Dorchester County Administrator, Jason L. Ward, Dorchester County Administrator, said, “Cindy is an outstanding advocate for veterans in Dorchester County and in the tri-county area.

“We are blessed to have her as our Veterans Affairs Officer,” Ward added.

Busby, in her role as Dorchester County Director of Veterans Affairs, helps ex-service members and eligible dependents with financial compensation claims, including but not limited to hospitalization, training, and insurance benefits.

Support SCAC’s Corporate Partners!

SCAC’s new Corporate Partners will be identified in the upcoming winter issue of SCAC’s County Focus Magazine (Vol. 31, No. 4) and 2021 Directory of County Officials!

SCAC launched a new Corporate Partner Program on January 1st that allows companies to market themselves efficiently and cost effectively to South Carolina’s 46 counties.

The program provides a comprehensive marketing opportunity for SCAC’s Corporate Partners to showcase their products and services directly to county leaders. The program also offers Corporate Partners year-round exposure to county officials and employees at multiple SCAC events and in the Association’s quarterly magazine and annual directory.
